

Your teenager and Medicare and Centrelink

When your child turns 14, the services and supports you use can change. For some things your child will be considered an adult.

When should I start planning?

Medicare

Once a child turns 14, families are no longer able to access a child's Medicare records. To act as a nominee for Medicare issues, you need to fill out the following form: Authorisation to act on an incapacitated persons behalf for Medicare.

Centrelink

Once your child turns 16 your benefits may change and there maybe new options for your child. You will need to look at the eligibility criteria to see what suits your child and family circumstances. The application process is quite involved so allow plenty of time.

What do I need to prepare?

You will need to provide copies of supporting documents such as your child's birth certificate, Medicare card, school reports, medical reports, bank statements, tax file numbers and set up a bank account in your child's name. Keep a copy of all completed forms and documents.

What payments might my child be eligible for?

Your child may be eligible for:

1. Disability Support Pension (DSP)

A payment that assists people with a permanent physical, intellectual or psychiatric condition that stops them from working.

5. Mobility Allowance for people who are not eligible for the NDIS

This is an income support payment for people with disability aged 16 or over who cannot use public transport without substantial assistance and are required to travel to and from their home for work, study, training or job search.

Your child cannot receive Mobility Allowance if they have an NDIS Plan.

Do my own payments change once my child turns 16?

Your payments, such as the Carer Payment and Carer Allowance, change when your child turns 16. Centrelink will contact you and you need to apply for a transfer to keep receiving the payment.
